I was in charge of this small project: to create the logo of the company. The project was really small and easy, so that's why I thought it was not necessary to do something special, only an icon to create it seemed a little "too important" for a first work. So I started to create the logo without thinking about it. I was really focused on the work and it was great. It was in the middle of my work that I discovered something amazing: I realized that the logo was the real hero of the project. It was the logo that inspired me to improve the features of the program and to finish the project. A very few days later I discovered that I had to do the same logo for all the other companies of the company. Fortunately the other companies were also really small projects so I was not overwhelmed by a lot of work. But in this short period of time, the same "new and improved" logo was created for all the other companies of the company. I was not able to do anything more, my job was done. I think that I could describe this little story with the following three words: Logo is the real hero of the project 1. A brief introduction A Team Vista was created more than 5 years ago and is now going to celebrate its 5th birthday. The idea of this Icons is that a collection of 5 Icons can be used in projects without the need to re-create all of them in a specific project. This is possible because these Icons
