HiTi CS320 Driver For Windows 10.I haven't been to a game of basketball or volleyball in many years, but still find myself deeply moved when they're on TV. Do you have your own way of getting in touch with your deeper self? Are there any sports or music that make you feel that way? Q: I think that having a "God that is me, too" is a crucial aspect of a deeply spiritual life. How can I cultivate a greater sense of awe? A: This week's question comes from Roger, who asks: Do you try to meditate with a tennis ball? Why? What effect has this practice had on you? I'd like to try to match my real-life practice to a meditation. A: Do I meditate with a tennis ball? Well, when I was a kid, I did exactly that. My mother was taking a Zen class back then, and though I didn't understand much of what she was saying, I knew that the teacher kept his meditation practice intensely practical: He made each meditation brief and very focused. Meditation, he explained, is like tennis; it's about keeping the ball in the court. Sometimes, of course, the ball gets away. But you have to hit it back. So I made the idea of a tennis ball the object of my meditation practice, and it seemed to work pretty well, though maybe the effect was psychological rather than spiritual. Because the exercise taught me to focus on my breath, to move it very
