(1963) Full Movie Free Download.Q: Adding new breaks to breakpoints in the browser I've found the standard practice to be to add a new breakpoint so you can step through a code path, but occasionally the standard path is not enough. In this case I've tried adding a breakpoint, and there is a console.log in the /callbacks/api.js: this.User.findOne({where:{isAdmin: true}})
.then(function(user) { response = { data: user } breakpoint(); console.log(response.data); })
.catch(function(error) { console.log(error); breakpoint(); }); This simply redirects to a page that looks like it's been rendered, without logging any of the console.logs in the file. It's not a config issue, I have my config.dev.js and config.prod.js set to explicitly set the reporter to karma-chrome-reporter and opened them both in their respective chrome windows, which I have set to be "developer tools" for both. A: The problem is that you are stopping on one of the promises in the promise chaining.
Instead, you should use the.then() for every promise before the last one. And that also means that, when the first promise resolves, all subsequent ones will automatically fire. Change this.User.findOne({where:{isAdmin: true}}) .then
