1. **Open any image in Photoshop**. The image shown here is an example using the same photo you find on the CD in the "Mastering the Tools" exercise that follows.
2. **Choose Image > Image Size**. A new menu item appears with the Image Size command. This command allows you to change the size and shape of an image.
3. **Click the slider at the top of the command's menu**. The image size menu appears. You see everything you would expect to see on a menu like this, including a slider that controls the width and height of the image. You can also do the same thing by dragging the image with the Selection tool after selecting Size from the Image menu, but that's not how most people choose to resize images. Most often, Photoshop users choose the Size button, as shown in Figure 5-9. FIGURE 5-9: Use the Image Size command to change the width and height of an image.

Q: How to find which.exe application has closed the window in Windows/OS X I have multiple applications with Quicktime player. When I click the other player then the media player close. If an application have windows close event, I need to detect that and I need to use the new media player. How can I do this with c/c++ or c#? A: There is no suitable event for this in Windows. On OS X 10.6 and 10.7 the solution is to create a C function which will be called by Cocoa applications and is able to detect when the application is about to exit the application. In Cocoa applications, in which events are delivered in the main thread, the notification function gets executed in the main thread. In C applications, notifications are delivered in the global event loop and can be processed in the global callback function. After enrichment with highly purified virus preparation that was obtained from the cells after 36 hours of incubation, the cells with the encephalomyocarditis virus were obtained. Polymerase chain reaction was used for the amplification of cDNA of adenovirus 2, in infected and uninfected cells. The presence of two forms of the cDNA amplified from cells were found. Both of them were identical to cDNA of the adenovirus 2.[Carcinoma of the cardia: diagnostic and therapeutical problems in the preoperative period].
