PUK Attacking Style Always keep the ball moving The number one technique that can unlock the opportunity to turn defence into attack. Through a move off the ball in midfield, the Puk can drive the ball into the penalty area - creating an overload situation - or simply drag play forwards from the back. 2 Delivering a good ball into the penalty box A great attacking threat for any number of reasons. The Puk can take defenders on - either by running at them himself, or by allowing one of the players on the right or left of the penalty area to do so. Either way, there should be plenty of space in the penalty area for the striker to run through and find a good delivery. Player Roles: Strike Man 3 Offering an effective goal threat An obvious one. Especially a good option from set plays. The Puk is a great marker and can hold up a defender, making them too big a target to attack. He will often hold on to the ball as he runs away from the opposition. Or he can attack from a deep position and charge at the goalkeeper, creating a chance for the striker to hit the target. Player Roles: Target Man 4 Providing an effective and smart focal point for the team One of the reasons why the Puk is the best passing option in the game. He can play with the ball at his feet and still release it to those around him. It means that they can be creative, but also that they can keep the play flowing and make high-quality passes. Player Roles: Play Maker FIFA UEFA Champions League Kick Off Mode Explore the legends of the European football scene. Become Lionel Messi or Cristiano Ronaldo.
