Bülbül Bülbül () is a Turkish snack and Turkish coffee named after and often associated with the town of Bülbül, near Ankara, in the Republic of Turkey. Bülbül and Persian "Mâshi-Bazârek" Bülbül originally came from the town of Bülbül in the province of Meram. It is a form of Mexican chocote similar to Mexican horchata. The cactus fruit is ground and then heated to release a flavor. It is also known as mashi-bazârek, although this term actually refers to a sweet, stewed fruit sweet such as pomegranate or medlar. Bülbül was first popularised in the 17th century when a Dutchman known as De Borcht named his son "Bülbül" after Bülbül. It was also common for Turkmens to carry Bülbül in their hats. The name Bülbül came from the Turkish word Bulbul meaning "Nightingale" or "Bubble" See also Bülbül Hamıtı (disambiguation) External links Bülbül Recipe Category:Turkish cuisine The research proposed involves studies of the mechanism of induction of the superoxide dismutase (SOD) enzyme and the relationship of enzyme induction to the resistance of tumor cells to antitumor drugs. The SOD enzyme will be purified to homogeneity and antibodies will be produced against it. The role of the enzyme in tumor cells, its mode of induction, and the enzyme-drug relationship will be studied. The hypothesis that the superoxide radical is a mediator of carcinogenesis and tumor promotion will be investigated. Travis Singh of the United Kingdom, age 20, takes his stand at the U.S. District Court. He and 17 other immigrants who were brought to the U.S. as children sued President Barack Obama, the Department of Homeland Security and the
